 VID-19 Background

Daily wage workers attempting to migrate back to their hometowns after losing their jobs

COVID-19 pandemic hit India in February, 2020 and by March the virus was spreading rapidly across the country. To curb the spread, the government announced a nationwide complete lockdown on 22 March, which was in effect until May 31, post which the restrictions were eased in a phased manner.

The lockdown put an unprecedented burden on the economy, with over 120 million people losing their jobs. The lockdown was especially devastating for the Micro and Small Enterprises. Almost 75% of the 120 million were small traders and wage workers, as per the data by Centre for Monitoring Indian Economy. Harrowing visuals of jobless migrant labourers stranded in metro cities and trying to make their way back to their hometowns in rural India, walking thousands of mile left the country aghast.

Despite the restrictions and challenges, ADRA India swung into action to help the needy and vulnerable people and provide immediate relief to those who were struggling to meet the very basic needs.

Project Overview

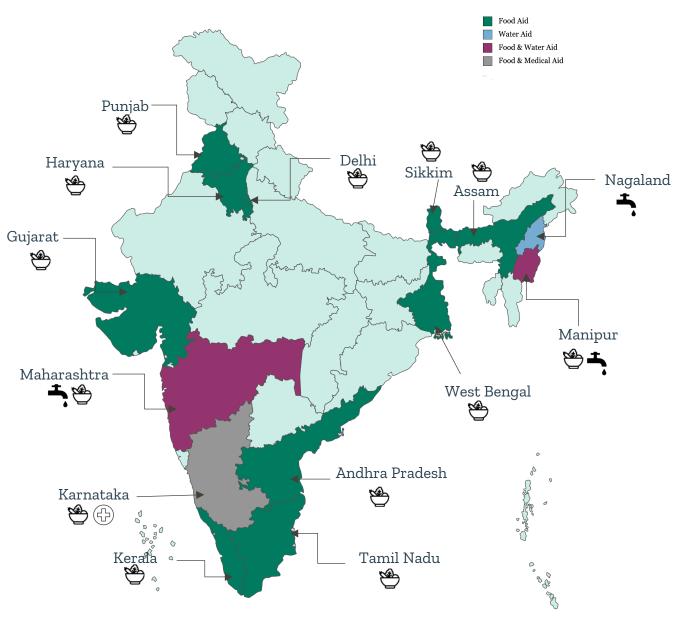

ADRA India identified need and localities with a high number of marginalized communities including construction workers, slum dwellers, those living Below Poverty Line (BPL), farmers, street vendors, and so on.

The project was designed ensuring sustainability. ADRA partnered with local communities to reach the hard to reach areas, build community ownership and management approach, making the end-users directly responsible for the operation and maintenance of the distribution activities and installed facilities.

The initial response included distribution of grocery items in the identified geographies. The project was then expanded to include medical health van and pump houses and borewells to provide water supply to villages with limited access to clean drinking water.

Success Story

Gowaramma, a homeless old lady from Mylayaram, Andhra Pradesh, was living under despicable conditions after the COVID-19 lockdown started. She took refuge at a newlyconstructed bus stop for at least two months before the team found her. The bus stop was deserted due to the lockdown imposed in India 22 March, 2020 onwards, which is why she was able to make it her temporary shelter. It was an open construction, which Gowaramma had covered with tattered sarees to protect herself from the heat. But she was forced to brave the rains as there was nowhere else to go.

Due to the lockdown and the fear of spread of the virus, Gowaramma was one of the many street inhabitants who had been forgotten and left to fend for themselves. Food and money were sparse, and she would sleep on an empty stomach oftentimes.

To overcome these challenges and help the needy during these testing times, ADRA India joined hands with the local community under the Total Members Involvement (TMI) Initiative. The ADRA India team was at the forefront even when people were scared of stepping out of their houses.

The intervention team identified Gowaramma and reached out to her with groceries and essentials to survive the lockdown. The old woman was ecstatic upon receiving the kit. She thanked the ADRA India team profusely and said, "God sent you as an angel during this pandemic when no one was giving me food due to the fear of COVID-19."

Under TMI Project, ADRA India engaged volunteers to locate areas inhabited by people in need including daily wagers, labourers, slum dwellers and the poor communities. After taking necessary government permissions to move around during the lockdown, ADRA India assisted those identified with at least a month's worth of groceries (dry food items) as most of the daily wage earners had lost their jobs during lockdown. The team went home to home and distributed grocery kits to 5395 families (26,975 Individuals) in a total of 26 cities in different parts of the country. It was a big challenge as the situation was critical because of virus. However, volunteers were successful in supporting the vulnerable people with the help of local police and authorities.
